Reading*8. Read the following comprehension passage and answer the questions:

Robots are machines that are capable of carrying out complex actions automatically. They can be guided by an external control device. Robots may be constructed on the lines of human form. A robot may convey a sense of intelligence or thought of its own. The branch of technology that deals with the design, construction, operation and application of robots is robotics. Robots can be used at home, in factories and in the medicine field. The word "robot" was first used in 1920 by Karel Capek. The first commercial digital robot was built by George Devol in 1954 and was named the Unimate. We can say that robots replaced humans in performing dangerous tasks which humans are unable to do. Reading

Read the passage and answer the questions:

One day in 1969, John Rendall and Anthony Burke saw a real live lion cub in a London department store window. Feeling that a lion should not be kept this way, they bought him and took him home to live in Rendall's basement. The lion, which they named Kristian, is said to have been an affectionate and extremely cooperative cat. But when Kristian grew to almost 200 pounds (90 kilograms), it was decided that he should be released into the wild. Kristian was brought to Africa where he adapted to life in the wild. A year later, Rendall and Burke travelled to Africa to say goodbye. They were warned that Kristian would not remember them. However, when Kristian saw his old friends, he ran towards them, stood on his back legs, and joyfully gave each of them a long and loving embrace.
